CURRENT CLIMATE

Face coverings are now a legal requirement in many public spaces around the world. This is because of the higher rates of community transmission of coronavirus.

The majority of masks are manufactured from long-lasting plastic materials, and if discarded can persist in the environment for decades to hundreds of years. This means they can have a number of impacts on the environment and people.

It's estimated the global use and disposal of masks and gloves will amount to 129 billion face masks and 65 billion plastic gloves for every month of the COVID-19 pandemic.

The University College London team examined the manufacture, use and disposal of masks that were disposable and reusable to calculate their overall environmental impact. They found machine washing reusable masks had the lowest environmental impact over a year.

THE FILTERED SOLUTION

Filtered Masks has recognised a need for reusable 3 ply cotton masks with a slit to place a filter for added protection.

Filtered masks is a refined, garment-like mask that is both comfortable and breathable for long periods of community use. Available in a range of monochromatic colours and engineered to feel as kind to your skin as they are to the environment.
